

Clipped

HEATHER A. WARREN

I forgot the way my tongue snaps in half when men speak louder
over my own speaking

I am merely bird
limp upon a windowsill

an attempt at flying clipped before my birth

I thought I was a boy and cried to my mother when I found blood between my legs

I am still her daughter but I am not her baby girl
